Darwin Day 2017

The Acceleration of Evolutionary Change in Human Society

Jeff Lipkes was born and raised in Los Angeles and educated at U.C. Berkeley and Princeton. He's taught at Northwestern, Penn State, Hollins College, and University of South Florida. Lipkes is the author of Politics, Religion, and Classical Economy in Britain and Rehearsals: The German Army in Belgium, August 1914. He translated Henri Pirenne's Belgium and the First World War and has edited a collection of the letters of British Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey, Dear Katharine Courageous. As Josh Michaels, he's published a novel, Outlaws, and edited a selection of the aphorisms of Mignon McLaughlin, Aperçus. Lipkes has also published a number of articles in scholarly and non-scholarly journals, and a dozen short stories. He's the organizer of Humanistic Jews of Tampa Bay, an affiliate of the Society for Humanistic Judaism.

JEFF LIPKES

Human Evolution: Where We've been-Where are we going?

There is no question that after the migration out of Africa around 50,000 years ago, population groups of homo sapiens continued to evolve, as attested to by distinctive DNA changes, as well as obvious physiological differences. But did cultural practices result in artificial selection for certain phenotypic traits by some groups much more recently? The question is obviously controversial. This lecture will explore the theses of some economists and anthropologists (historians have ignored the subject) concerning the Jews and the English. Why did the Jews become traders and then moneylenders in medieval Europe, the middle class of early modern Poland, and then, after Emancipation, were so successful in certain fields in Europe and America? Why did the English pioneer the industrial revolution and then create an empire that, at its height, ruled over more than quarter of the world's population and a quarter of its land mass? The answers a few courageous scholars have provided are intriguing, and worth a close look.

Dr. Lipkes talk is sponsored by the Tampa Bay Coalition of Reason and Clearwater UU Humanists and is free. It will be at 12:30 on Sunday, February 19th. Venue: the UU Octagon at 2470 Nursery RD in Clearwater

Tom Flynn's previously announced talk for CFI will be rescheduled.

Wedding, Child naming, Memorial?

Florida has a large number of celebrants who are specially trained to solemnize the important life transitions in the Humanist way. <http://thehumanistsociety.org/celebrants/map/#FL>

Humanists work to build a world in which happiness is the enduring criterion of all policy.

What is the Humanist Way?

1. To extend a human centered approach to the critical problems of life and society.

2. To encourage attitudes of kindness, compassion, tolerance and a loving generosity in human relationships, and in our treatment of all life. These attitudes help us to see ourselves in the lives of others, and encourage appreciation for the remarkable diversity of human culture and experience.

3. To develop and popularize the skills of creative and critical thinking that empower people to challenge prejudice, superstition and irrationality in every area of life. Such empowerment enables the individual to reach the highest levels of achievement.

4. To exalt those artistic and imaginative expressions of life which have been the source of the greatest pleasure and enlightenment, and which reflect compelling human truths. Through music, literature, art, dance, and other expressions, we embrace the essence of what it means to be human.

5. To explore the grounds of ethics and morality within the unfolding history of our evolving culture. Such knowledge will enable us to become effective protagonists for the happiness of the individual person. JP

The Movable Feast

the Humanist Society's monthly social Dinner is on hiatus!

Is there no one amongst you who would like to coordinate this 20 year old tradition?

What this is about is simply to find a nice quiet, reasonably priced restaurant where 12 to 22 humanists can sit down to enjoy a lengthy discussion and a fine meal with good friends,... before tearing into subtle disagreements over philosophical and political issues of many kinds, just to show they can really do it.

We need a coordinator for this!... Maybe you? Write to: jim@suncoasthumanist.com

This is a high status, prestigious position within the organization that will cause you to swell up with pride (and possibly indigestion) in being a part of the smooth running mechanism that is organized humanism. (hmmmpf...#@%)

Laugh Lines Okey Dokey... Here's more 02-17

1. Where there's a will, I want to be in it.
2. The last thing I want to do is hurt you ... but it's still on my list.
3. To be sure of hitting the target, shoot first and call whatever you hit the target.
4. If I agreed with you, we'd both be wrong.
5. We never really grow up -- we only learn how to act in public.
6. War does not determine who is right, only who is left.
7. Knowledge is knowing a tomato is a fruit. Wisdom is not putting it in a fruit salad.
8. To steal ideas from one person is plagiarism. To steal from many is research.
9. I didn't say it was your fault, I said I was blaming you.
10. In filling out an application, where it says, "In case of emergency, notify..." I answered "a doctor."
11. Women will never be equal to men until they can walk down the street with a bald head and a beer gut, and still think they are sexy.
12. You do not need a parachute to skydive. You only need a parachute to skydive twice.
13. I used to be indecisive, but now I'm not so sure.

As Humanists it is our task to discover the secret world above and within the level of conscious recognition. Using the instruments of reason, and critical thinking, we strive to be at one in understanding both the world that made us, and the one we are inventing.

Each month a new investigation thoughtfully and critically dissects a new intersection of mind and matter. Be part of it.

Promoting Action & Unity in the Tampa Bay Area

Join the Freethought Organizations of the Tampa Bay Area: Center for Inquiry-Tampa Bay, Humanist Society of the Suncoast, Tampa Humanist Association, Institute for Science and Human Values, Freethinkers@USF,* UU Humanists Clearwater, Atheists of Florida, UU Humanists Tampa,* plus numerous Meetup organizations that promote serious secular discussion and activity about important issues in our area and beyond.

Thus substantive and exciting new activities are offered to the Tampa Bay area that were not possible for most organizations before.

We are especially grateful to the national office of the United Coalition of Reason and its director, Jason Heap. You may recall that UCoR was the major impetus to getting a large number of billboards erected in Tampa Bay and across the nation with such messages as "You can be good without God. Millions are!"

TBCoR is an alliance of groups identified with the secular / freethought / Humanist /Atheist movement.

As this momentum continues to grow, we will keep you informed of developments . JP

Humanist Quotes

*If we attend continually and promptly to the little that we can do, we shall ere long be surprised to find how little remains that we cannot do.
~ Samuel Butler*

An autonomous project of the Humanist Society. Affiliate of PCI

Life implies death—one's own mortality above all. Everything has limits. Wisdom resides in the understanding that we are subject to forces we cannot control, and that we must respect and accommodate ourselves to those forces. If we want to have language, farming, cities, and energy, then we must make a deliberate cultural effort to maintain an attitude of individual and collective humility. In practical terms, that means keeping the size of our global population low enough so that it can be supported long-term without eroding natural systems, managing consumption so that resources are not depleted and non-biodegradable wastes do not accumulate, and maintaining checks on wealth inequality.

Obviously, we haven't been doing these things very well, especially in recent decades. The power of fossil fuels fed our collective megalomania. Like people in previous civilizations, we went out on a limb—but modern energy and technology enabled us to go much further than any humans had before. Still, as all civilizations do, ours has reached the point of diminishing returns, of over-reach. Before us lies the senescence and death of a way of living and of seeing the world. Perhaps the new president's qualities of character are emblematic of these final stages of cultural disintegration.

In the days to come, there will be plenty of opportunities for resistance, protest, and, one hopes, celebration. Inauguration Day 2017 is a turning point; for me, it seems a perfect occasion for a walk in the woods.

"Florida Student and School Personnel Religious Liberties Act." House Bill 303 and Senate Bill 436

Members of Atheists of Florida support free speech and religious freedom for everyone, students included. However, after having read these bills, we are concerned about the direct conflict this has with U.S. Code 4071, "Denial of equal access prohibited", commonly referred to as the Equal Access Act (EAA), as well as the establishment clause of the U.S. constitution and the Florida Constitution, Article 1 Section 3.

While much of HB 303 and SB 436 agrees with the EAA, the involvement of employees with a student group is in direct conflict. EAA states: "employees or agents of the school or government are present at religious meetings only in a non-participatory capacity;". These bills, in Paragraph 4(a)1. (b)1. states "A school district may not prevent school personnel from participating in religious activities on school grounds that are initiated by students at reasonable times before or after the school day if such activities are voluntary and do not conflict with the responsibilities or assignments of such personnel." There is no avoiding the inherently sectarian nature of religious expression. All of it is grounded in differently evolved religious, national, and social traditions. Each religion proclaims its own inerrancy and superiority to all the others. This cannot help but to create disunity, dissension, and strife as it has so often in the past.

Since HB 303 and SB 436 applies to all schools in a district, how do you propose we protect younger students from being unduly influenced by a teacher? When a scientologist, Satanist, or someone from a cult or "unpopular" religion encourages students to start a club, how does your bill address the potential for abuse of the trust students have placed in that authority figure? It seems all too easy for an employee to "take over" a student organization, whether intentionally or not, simply because of the relationship that students have with a teacher or staff person. Adults are often viewed as guides in many aspects of life. Those adults moved by religious feelings may often be disposed to dispense the "superior" values of their religion in a fully beneficent way in their own view. If the adult in question is a teacher, is this not going to pressure students in their class to feel required to participate in that teacher's openly professed religion, lest they fear being "penalized" by the teacher for not being part of his/her group?

The social values and individual virtues promoted by the traditional secular framework of our schools seem wholly adequate to inculcate the necessary attributes to become a valued and worthwhile citizen. The founders of our country seemed to appreciate the fact that religion is mostly a matter of private discretion, and ought not to be the subject of government selection. The current federal law seems quite adequate in giving students the rights addressed by these bills, without complicating the matter with employee involvement.

Please call your representatives to ask them to vote against these bills as they are written.

These bills were introduced by Representative Kimberly Daniels (D) and Senator Dennis Baxley (R).

Humanist Families of Greater Tampa

Jennifer Hancock started this organization several years ago. It uniquely serves Humanist families with a variety of wonderful programs throughout the year. There is a strong emphasis on creative childrearing. Here, you can make connection with other families dealing with the problems of living in a society that is still hostile to an explicitly Humanist Way of life. Jennifer is author of several books including: The Humanist Handbook, The Humanist Approach to Happiness, and her latest book, The Bully Vaccine.

Humanist Families organizes social outings every month. These are opportunities to do something fun, socialize and enjoy each other's company. Sometimes we go to a park, sometimes a museum, sometimes we go swimming. Our group has grown over the past year to the point we now organize Tampa area outings and Manatee/Sarasota area outings every month.

Throughout the year we host parties like Darwin Day in February, World Humanist Day in June, Freethought Day at Disney in October and Carl Sagan Day in November. Among our spin off groups, is a Parenting Beyond Belief group which gets together to discuss the challenges of raising children without religion. We are on Facebook.

A Global March for Equality, Reason, and Freedom

It's impossible to say just how many people took part in the Women's Marches in Washington and around the world, but many estimates by academics and experts easily place the number in the millions, such that over 1% of the U.S. population took to the streets on January 21.

The Center for Inquiry was proud to be one of the dozens of partner organizations supporting the march. In Washington, CFI-DC coordinated with the Secular Coalition for America to join the hundreds of thousands who gathered there, and members of other CFI branches took part in their cities as well. Even in places where there was no "official" CFI presence, our friends and volunteers were there.

And rightly so, for among the issues raised by demonstrators were those that CFI has always championed: women's rights, LGBTQ equality, defending and supporting science and its findings, the advancement of reason and evidence-based thinking, the rejection of conspiracy theories and "alternative facts," opposition to religious imposition into government and people's lives, and of course the freedom of expression.

CFI-Indiana Executive Director Reba Boyd Wooden addressed the crowd at the march in Indianapolis, and she spoke out strongly for the values we fight for: Our tax money should go to support public schools which serve everyone not to private for-profit schools or to religious schools that promote a particular religion. Public schools should be neutral on the subject of religion so that students of all religions and no religion feel welcome. ... We will stand up for equality for all, freedom for individuals to practice the religion of their choice including the freedom to not practice any religion, freedom of expression in speech, press, peaceful assembly, and public policy based on the best science available.

Building a Wall that Really Matters

While on the campaign trail, President Trump promised to repeal the Johnson Amendment, which prohibits churches from participating in campaign politics. Now, a bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives to do just that, which would allow churches to inject unaccountable “dark money” into our elections and endorse candidates from the pulpit, all while maintaining their preferential tax status.

We cannot afford to sit back while these attacks on our democracy occur. That’s why the American Humanist Association and our 501c4 lobbying organization, the Center for Freethought Equality, will be hosting a series of congressional briefings on Capitol Hill focusing on protecting the Johnson Amendment and the separation of church and state.

Can you take a moment right now to encourage your Representative, Senators, and their staffers to attend the AHA’s Johnson Amendment briefings on January 31?

With so much happening in the world, it’s easy to feel that the problems are too large and far away for us to have a positive impact. But with your help, we can make sure that Congress doesn’t damage the wall of separation between church and state.

Contact your Representative and Senators right now and ask that their office is present at our crucially important briefing on the Johnson Amendment. Sending an email takes just a minute, and making a phone call can make a big difference.

Thank you for taking the time to stand up for the separation of church and state.

Sincerely,
Roy Speckhardt
Executive Director, American Humanist Assoc.

What would Count as Evidence against Theism or Biblical Inerrancy?

This year (2017), for the first time, Bob Jones University closed in honor of the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. The University’s long history of anti-Black racism is well-known, so this must be considered as at least a small step forward. (They did not even accept Blacks to the school until the 1970s and banned interracial dating until at least the year 2000.) However, when religionists change their views, it never occurs to most of them that the changes they embrace mean that they – and their God – were wrong. Yet they profess to embrace a perfect, omniscient God that never makes mistakes. What’s up with that?

The usual rationalization is that they misinterpreted” Scripture, but finally got it right. Others maintain that God finally touched their hearts and changed them for the better. They never seem to notice that God does not change their hearts and minds until after the rest of society has moved ahead. This, of course, means that they are simply coming late to the party. It makes their God look like a slacker.

What's New with Religion These Days?

Tuesday, January 31 at 7 PM

Southern Brewing & Winemaking: 4500 N. Nebraska Ave.

Jim Strange, Religious Studies
Strange asserts that crises in faith are not confined to the 20th or 21st centuries and that there is a continued separation between "religion" and "spirituality" due to advancing secularism around the world.

John Napora, Anthropology
Napora draws on numerous faiths to discuss the relevance of religion today in terms of charity, toleration, and compassion.

James Cavendish, Sociology
Cavendish studies religious affiliation, belief, and practice in the U.S. to describe the rise of the religiously unaffiliated and what this reveals about the meaning of religion in people's lives today.

The Netherlands picks up the fallen banner of Women's health rights as the U. S. retreats into a Swamp of Religious Tribalism

The world has responded with fear and outrage to many of President Donald Trump's repressive actions since taking office, and the Dutch government immediately announced plans to counter one: the reinstatement of the "global gag rule" which cuts off U.S. funding to any NGO around the world that mentions abortions.

Minister for Foreign Trade and Development Cooperation Lilianne Ploumen announced the government's plan for a new international abortion fund on Tuesday.

"Banning abortions does not result in fewer abortions," said Ploumen, according to teleSUR. "It leads to more irresponsible practices in back rooms and more maternal deaths. We must not let this happen."

The Independent adds:

[Ploumen] told colleagues: "This has far-reaching consequences. First of all, for all those women who have to make, if they want to have a child, a choice, but also for their husbands and children and society as a whole."

[...]She also quoted figures from Marie Stopes International, one group which would lose funding under the initiative, suggesting up to 14 women a day could die as a result of the gag.

The gag rule, also known as the "Mexico City Policy," was instituted by President Ronald Reagan and kept in place by subsequent Republican presidents, while it was repealed by both Democrats, as Common Dreams noted.

Planned Parenthood also explained the dire results to come from Trump's executive order. "When in place, the global gag rule (also known as the Mexico City Policy) has had enormous and harmful impacts on women's lives," the group wrote:

- In many communities, the most experienced providers of women's healthcare were cut off—sometimes, the only provider of any essential healthcare in their community and clinics were shut down.
- It also stifled the free speech of doctors and of advocates in the country and weakened civil society.
- Multiple studies have come out looking at the impact of the global gag rule and they have found that the primary impact is lost access to contraceptives, and in turn, increased rates of abortion—which are primarily unsafe.

"Ploumen wants to launch a new fund that could be supported by governments, businesses, and social organizations to 'compensate this financial setback as much as possible,'" reports the Associated Press.

Trump's reinstatement of the gag rule has been met with strong resistance stateside as well, and Sen. Jeanne Shaheen (D-NH) introduced legislation Tuesday that would repeal the rule for good, as Common Dreams reported.

A big part of the American Dream is dying

* By Andy Kiersz

One of the most important parts of the American Dream is the hope that your children will be better off than you are. Unfortunately, that is becoming less common. The likelihood that children at age 30 had a higher inflation-adjusted income than their parents did when they were the same age has been dropping over the last several decades, according to a recent study by Stanford economist Raj Chetty and his team at the Equality of Opportunity Project cited by Jeff Gundlach in his presentation released earlier this month.

By combining data from the Census Bureau with anonymized tax record information, Chetty and his team were able to approximate the likelihood that children would earn more than their parents for different levels of parental income, and show how that likelihood changed over the decades.

As the chart shows, around 90% of children born in 1940 across the entire income distribution earned more than their parents did at age 30. That percentage dropped each decade, with only about 50% of children born in 1980 earning more than their parents. See the chart here: <http://read.bi/2k5NFc3>.

“Let’s take stock for a moment. We entered into this discussion of revelation because it is through revelation that we are supposedly made aware of God’s commands. If God is to have any direct role to play with respect to morality, either as moral dictator or moral adviser, we would need to be able to receive instructions from him. Our analysis of revelation has established that God effectively has no way to communicate his commands to us. Even if he were to transmit a command through a prophet, we would have no way of confirming this was a divine command. But the situation is even worse than this. What purported revelations we do have from God are inconsistent.” – Ron Lindsay, The Necessity of Secularism, pg 93

Great Humanist Quotes

The human mind is greater than any book. The mind sits in judgment on every book. If there be truth in the book, we take it; if error, we discard it. Why refer this to the Bible? In this country, the Bible has been used to support slavery and capital punishment; while in the old countries, it has been quoted to sustain all manner of tyranny and persecution. All reforms are anti-Bible. ~ William Lloyd Garrison

In his celebrated book, "On Liberty", the English philosopher John Stuart Mill argued that silencing an opinion is "a peculiar evil." If the opinion is right, we are robbed of the "opportunity of exchanging error for truth"; and if it's wrong, we are deprived of a deeper understanding of the truth in its "collision with error." If we know only our own side of the argument, we hardly know even that: it becomes stale, soon learned by rote, untested, a pallid and lifeless truth. ~ Carl Sagan
